Key Coaching Points for Proper Heading Technique

 The forehead is the primary point of contact
Players can sometimes use side of forehead

 The player's neck should be stiff
Their mouth should also be closed with their chin tucked in

 The player's arms are up for protection
This helps shield their torso from other players

 The torso is perpendicular to the ground
Their body is brought back early then "snapped" forward.

 Knees are bent
The player is in an athletic stance to thrust forward.

 Feet are shoulder-width apart
The player is on the balls of his or her feet in preparation.
